Metro folk enjoy holiday break from brownouts

By Abigail L. Ho

WITH MOST INDUSTRIES AND OFFICES closed for the Araw ng Kayapangan holiday yesterday, residents of Metro Manila and surrounding areas were spared from occasional brownouts as available capacity met peak electricity demand.

According to the National Grid Corp. of the Philippines, yesterday's available capacity in the Luzon Grid reached 6,457 megawatts (MW), 120 MW more than the peak load of 6,337 MW.

While gross power availability remained high in the Luzon Grid, available capacity yesterday was at least able to cover another round of brownouts.

But, while available capacity should be enough to meet the short-term demand, there is no assurance that supply will be enough when regular industrial and commercial activities resume on Monday.

Last Thursday, certain places under the Manila Electric Co. distribution area suffered outages lasting between ten and three hours, against only two hours the day before.

Manobo announced it was scheduling rotational brownouts to down power of its electric sub because of "insufficient generation power capacity of the power generation suppliers."

War veterans to get P1.2B in unpaid benefits

By Christine G. Arendano

BY WHAT COULD BE HER LAST PRESIDENTIAL could be her last presidential campaign to honor the veterans of World War II, President Maanog Arroyo yesterday ordered the release last month of P1.2 billion worth of benefit payments to the surviving soldiers who fought in that war.

The President made the announcement shortly after returning from an overnight visit to Hanoi, Vietnam, where she attended the 16th Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) Leaders' Summit.

Last summit: Asean leaders bid GMA adieu

By Philip C. Tiborea

HANOI—WITH OTHER REGIONAL leaders, she looked back on a decade's worth of summitry and bid photographic adieu for posterity.

After transacting with fellow Association of Southeast Asian Nations leaders, some of whom she has known for more than a decade, President Maanog Arroyo yesterday wrapped up her last Asean summit before stepping down in June.

As she walked through the conference center at the end of the summit for her flight back to Manila, the Asean's message was stopped several times by people who wanted to have their photos taken with her.

3-cornered fight shaping up 1 month before polls

By TJ Bergin

WITH A MONTH LEFT in the campaign, the presidential race is shaping up to be a three-cornered fight among Sen. Benigno "Noy" Aquino III, Sen. Manuel "Manny" Villar, and deposed President Joseph "Erap" Estrada, according to political analysts.

"It's not anymore a two-cornered fight. Gibo (administration standard bearer Gilbert Teodoro) is out of the running. It's a pity," Ramon Gojo yesterday told the Inquirer, citing the latest Pulse Asia survey.

If Aquino keeps his lead over Villar in the next survey expected in two weeks, he has the presidency in the bag, said Gojo, the executive director of the Institute for Politics and Electoral Behavior.

And the big number of undecided voters in the last leg of the campaign can be crucial for Aquino to vote a landslide or for Estrada to catch up with Villar, Gojo said.

In the Pulse Asia survey, the undecided respondents grew to 4 percent. Bobby Tancin, the director for policy studies of the Center for People Empowerment in Governance, made an internal analysis of a three-cornered fight.

In line with an order issued by a Morong, Rizal court, 38 members of the so-called "Morong 38" group of health workers were brought to Camp Crame on board a Philippine Army bus yesterday morning.

About half an hour later, the Philippine National Police (PNP) promptly sent them back to the military's Camp Crame in Rizal, saying it had no room for them in its crowded detention facility.

PNP spokesperson Chief Sgt.

Leonardo Espino said the national police had filed a motion for reconsideration with the Morong regional trial court branch rejecting the detainees' transfer to Camp Crame.

The PNP motion said its detention center would not be able to accommodate the 38 because the facility built

Church firm against gays in Congress

THE MEXICAN COURT ruled Thursday that gay couples cannot sue in the U.S. 13 elections. Last summit: Asean leaders bid GMA adieu

In last installment of what was achieved by the two-day 14th Asian summit, Mr. Arroyo said the group had taken the right steps to achieve a functioning Asian Economic Community in the near future.

For one thing, Asean leaders issued a summit statement detailing the actions they will take to create a regional community "dedicated to essential change," she said.

'Vision to action'

Before going to Manila, Mr. Arroyo had called on the region in "spirit with one voice" on this issue.

The statement of intent says Asean "Vision to Action" and I think we achieved a lot on what actions we should do to make the Asian Community a reality by 2015," the President said upon leaving.

The President left Manila at around noon after the summit ended but a few hours before the 1:30 p.m. scheduled departure.

The outgoing Asean leaders were supposed to have a last-hour meeting with Vietnamese President Nguyen Minh Triet but Triet became ill and the meeting was cancelled in his behalf.

The President explained that that last remaining meeting was "hours of a social event."

Worked about PG

Daily issues after the summit here on Thursday, Press Secretary Crispino Abad announced that the President was planning to return home because she wanted to be with her husband, José Mari Arroyo, who is recovering from a heart ailment.

But she eventually stayed in Manila overnight. A Malacanan official explained that Mr. Arroyo had thought that the Asean leaders would be able to finish their discussion on Thursday but some issues "were worked out" and the summit ended on Friday morning to the President's delight to say.

Besides attending the summit, Mr. Arroyo also held meetings with Vietnamese Prime Minister Nguyen Tan Dung and Malaysian Prime Minister Najib Razak.

Lopez said the President "intentionally" left Manila after the summit because she knew from the start they were facing no real possibility of their respective countries.

"They've been friends and business partners for 15 years," he said.

Lopez said the President seemed "happy" about the conditions of her husband although Jose Miguel Arroyo has been discharged from hospital.

"I think they worked about the First Gentleman... We are also disappointed because Thailand was not able to come," he added.

Goal of single market

The summit took place amid an ongoing political crisis in Thailand that forced Prime Minister Abinut to resign and declare a state of emergency and control his trip to Manila. Thailand's "Red Shirt" protesters, who briefly occupied parliament this week, are mostly supporters of ousted leader Thaksin Shinawatra and want Abinut to resign and new elections.

Despite Thailand's situation, Asean leaders found consensus about adopting strategies for keeping economic growth on track, but warning their political and economic community and building common sense on the way changes.

Asean leaders reaffirmed their goal to achieve the Asian Economic Community, which will establish Asean "as a single market and production base by 2015."

It is a separate document focusing solely on the region's "joint response to climate change," they called for enhanced monthly collaboration on how to downsize climate change effects and in providing detailed assessments on impacts, the vulnerability of the region, and adaptation options.

They added that they would incorporate climate change mitigation and adaptation strategies into their national development policies "in line with sustainable development."

Election in Burma

The election to military ruled Burma (Myanmar) was not on the agenda but still occupied the attention of some of the Asean leaders, concerned about recent crackdowns on human rights and press freedom.

Indonesia and the Philippines have publicly criticized Burma's election which has political prisoners, such as opposition leader Aung San Mye Thaw, in custody.

Asean leaders have stressed the importance of holding free elections in Burma this year. Bangladesh (Thailand) have left the date of the election open.

The Asean leaders and they were invited by Burmese Prime Minister Thein Sein on the "progress made" in the implementation of its Road Map to Democracy, "especially the preparations for the general election in November 2010."

He underscored the importance of national reconciliation in Myanmar and the holding of the general election is a "first, late, and inclusive measure that contributes to Myanmar's stability and development," the group said.

Support for KP

The Asean leaders also took note of the Philippine effort to host the scheduled of the Asian Intergovernmental Conference on Human Rights.

The group also welcomed in support for the Philippine presidency of the 2010 G-20.

clear this Declaration Treaty review conference and welcomed the upcoming "No Clear Security Summit" in Washington, DC.

Pakistani recruiter faces ouster

A PAKISTANI RECRUITER IS FACING DEPORTATION FOR large-scale illegal immigration in Pakistan.

Immigration Commissioner Marceline Lhuissier said the foreigner, identified as Hameed Akhtar alias father Zia Ullah is currently detained at the immigration detention centre in Burnaby, Surrey City.

Lhuissier said Ullah was detained as an undesirable and undocumented alien following his arrest along with his Filipino wife, Amy Tawana, on March 23 by the Port of Vancouver police.

In his report to Lhuissier, Immigration Area Office (IAO) Region 5 Director Jon Tan said Ullah was the subject of some plans by 15 Filipinos in Pakistan who were allegedly recruited by the couple in their illegal recruitment racket.

Tan said the Pakistani could not present his passport or any travel documents when apprehended.

The 21 complainants alleged that they were coerced by Ullah and his wife to give P20,000 each to recruit a few dozen immigrants overseas.

The complainants sought the help of the police when they learned that the couple was planning to leave the country without notice.

Upon investigation, Ullah claimed that he was a Pakistani and British citizen and that he arrived in the country sometime in July or August last year.

Witnesses of Ullah's claim, however, showed that the name of the subject did not appear in the computerized travel records of the country, meaning suspicion that he illegally entered the country via the southern back door.

100 years ago, a quest began that resulted in one of history's most important breakthroughs — the very first formula milk. This started a revolution in pediatric nutrition, and gave way to a century of more finds from Wyeth, like Iron, Vitamin C and Whey Distillate Protein in formula milk. Wyeth is also the first international formula manufacturer to fortify formula milk with nucleotides, DHA, & AA*, Gerdinoids and Lactin.

So here's to you and your little one. Here's to hopes and dreams. Here's to a whole new era of innovation and a renewed commitment to nurture the future.

"That in all things, God may be glorified"

Violence prelude to chaos

THIS YEAR, MAY 12 (FRIDAY) AND APRIL 16 (SATURDAY) are the same date. Perhaps in keeping with the sinister spirit of both, there are the dark forces engaged by many Filipinos. Philippine newspapers played up for four days now stories that the Communist Party in Mindanao says that the coming ink was used to print Salvo. Another ink used to print Salvo and two others including the printing of the Philippines.

Enough that in some people, there was a fighting spirit. In fact, there are suggestions that the May 2010 election may not bring the solution for which we are praying.

Ceres deserves congratulations for narrating positive story

MR. CHRIS P. JORDAN'S APRIL 1, 2010, article "Ceres compelling story: election" was a good holiday gift to me. It's very easy to read good news such as this one.

The director of the first department is to improve their performance using the Public Government Contract, the report was also being given to the public by helping the nation to improve by starting from the "good news" and by providing themselves from the negative side.

Actually it's not the "bad" side will make this nation better. It is, in fact, the positive and the public. Public service and must be used to build a better nation, and not to build a better nation.

As a former member of the Philippine House of Representatives, I may be able to help the nation to improve by starting from the "good news" and by providing themselves from the negative side.

Troops regain poor village from rebels

By Florence S. Bana
Cebu City

ONCE A STRONGHOLD of the communist New People's Army (NPA), Linauigan, a mountainous barangay 33 kilometers from the city proper of Zamboanga, Negros Oriental, has become a security-free zone.

It could only be reached by a motorcycle, locally known as habal habal, through an access road that could become muddy and slippery.

The village boasts of thick forests and a wide array of flora and fauna. People still gather and wash clothes in the clear creeks and rivers, such as the Panguy and Hooliman, that snake through the hills.

Many portions of the land area of 1,646 hectares are planted in corn, rice and root crops, which are sold in the market at the town proper.

Linauigan's 2,213 residents (154 families), most of whom speak Cebuano, are scattered in 11 sitios (subdivisions) lying on rolling hills, rugged terrain and 40-degree slopes.

Disputed by gov't

What made the place attractive to the communist rebels was the absence of government presence, as infrastructure needs fell unattended.

The people depend only on wells and springs for drinking water. Only 10 percent of them completed the elementary grades, 18 percent graduated from high school and only 10 percent went to college.

Most are unemployed and their lives have lived in poverty. Unemployment has become prevalent, especially among children.

The residents felt that they were abandoned by the government, which the rebels had exploited.

Communist tendinles were conducted and a strong, complicated network of members and sympathizers was established in what was considered virtual control of the government.

Linauigan became the only township in Zamboanga where almost all families pay "revolutionary taxes," ranging from 200 to 1,500 per household per month.

The Revolutionary Commission replaced the barangay council, and a Militia up layer (People's Military) kept the area under lockdown.

Because of this situation, Zamboanga was on the list of communist-infested townships in the first quarter of 2008.

Transformation

Little did the rebels know that the military were closely watching every grudge over the money-collected threat.

In March 2008, Lt. Col. Francisco Tancin, the Army's 11th Infantry Battalion commander, ordered both military and territorial approaches to the village of the rebels.

Multiple tactics clearing operations were staged in Balacan out of the area and to strengthen. A company of soldiers stayed to provide security.

At first, the residents refused to talk with the soldiers. To make matters worse, some of the members of the barangay council indicated threat. All were suspicious because the rebels had portrayed the government troops as evil, abusive tyrants and enemies.

Gradually, the soldiers gained their trust by listening to them and doing their best to address their concerns. They initiated dialogues and joined some-community activities.

Rebels and police realized "standing on bay Lapulapu" and "Kare no Lapulapu" bearing the badge of the Philippine were placed in conspicuous places to encourage the people to report rebel presence.

After a few weeks, the people started giving information to the soldiers, who learned that the village had a deeper, more complicated web of Communist Party members, allies, supporters and hangers-on, spies, saboteurs and conspirators.

The Army now had proming the rebels from entering the village was not enough. They decided to implement modern projects, such as the "Bantay sa Cacao," a food-saving center in Bantay City that government donated 600 pairs of slippers, books, clothing, school supplies and toys.

The items were distributed during a medical mission undertaken by the Army in cooperation with nongovernmental organizations and schools in Zamboanga.

With the help of the Armed Forces of the Philippines Command (Command), the Army launched a 1998,000 people water system in Linauigan. The Command also provided medical assistance with the office of Negros Oriental Rep. Arsenio Lakambing (PDP-Laban).

A television set, DVD player and satellite dish were donated to the Linauigan Elementary School to facilitate the teaching and learning activities of the students.

The Army also helped put up a classroom building for the school with donated living quarters for its teachers, which was inaugurated on March 11, 2009. Then Army chief Lt. Gen. Victor B. Beske donated five sets of drinking equipment.

Toward

The military efforts appeared to have paid off when they were able to encourage its rebels to surrender. Cash and foodstuffs were awarded to the residents through the social integration program of the Office of the Provincial Affairs or Peace Process.

More than 200 rebel supporters also pledged support for the military.

When the barangay council declared its support to the Army, its officials began receiving their salaries through bank accounts and acceptance letters.

The residents, however, decided that they would do everything to remain free from NPA control and even declared to their organizations and relatives "proclaim anti-NPA."

Automated absentee voting in HK, Singapore: This is it

WILL THE PHILIPPINES FIRST automated elections work? The start of the weekend absentee voting today in Hong Kong and Singapore will give us an idea.

These are the real elections, not mock elections sponsored by the Commission on Elections (COMELEC) in Manila, which is the venue of the weekend absentee voting exercises.

While the Commission on Elections is conducting the mock voting exercises, overseas citizens voting here must have had a mail-in Philippine return already in progress. Today, only those in Hong Kong and Singapore will go high-tech and use the Personal Count Optical Scan machines.

Other Philippine voters in other parts of the planet will have to manually fill out their ballot by writing the names of their preferred candidates on the ballot, under the rules promulgated earlier by the COMELEC.

They will personally cast their votes at designated foreign service posts or mail their ballots back to the Philippine Embassy/Consulate nearest them. The same methods used in elections.

The COMELEC decided to start building the automated structure in Hong Kong and Singapore because of the high volume of registered voters. There—95,365 in Hong Kong and 31,801 in Singapore.

“We will closely monitor the process. We will see where it works or not.” The COMELEC will be at a press briefing on Thursday by the COMELEC and the Department of Foreign Affairs.

500,000 absentee voters

The Overseas Absentee Voting Act of 2003, known as Republic Act No. 9189, enables Philippine voters abroad to participate in national elections by allowing them to vote by mail and postal ballot replacement. The law applies to Philippine citizens abroad who are at least 18 years old on the day of the election. Qualified citizens register to be overseas absentee voters before the COMELEC representative in the Philippines.

Overseas absentee voters can vote at the Philippine Embassy/Consulate or other foreign service establishments covering their area.

Overseas voters may vote in any post that has adopted personal voting. For postal voting, they can vote in any place where there are international airports identified and recommended by the COMELEC.

As many as 500,000 Philippine voters registered for the weekend absentee voting, which runs today until May 15.

Embassies and consulates are to be open for voting starting at 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Reports from Leticia B. Salazar and Guinevere de Guzman, inquiries in Manila.

New Kyrgyz rulers hail Russia, to shut US base

BISEK—KYRGYZSTAN'S NEW proclaimed new leadership said on Thursday that Russia had helped to save President Gennady Idenko and that they aimed to close a U.S. base near its border with Moscow.

Their common aim Wednesday's members of Baidyev, who had the capital shifted to newly renamed government buildings, finally in the control of independent Russia in central Asia.

The current head president Kurmanbek Bakiyev and Deputy Moldovskiy signed an arms reduction pact in Prague on an offer to "freeze" nuclear relations from a mutual official in Moldovskiy's delegation, report Kyrgyzstan's new rulers in their first move.

The officials, who declared to be neutral, noted that Baidyev had not fulfilled a promise to shut the U.S. base in the Kyrgyzstan, which the United States aims to supply from its troops in Afghanistan. He said there should be only one base in Kyrgyzstan, a Russian one.

On Thursday, Baidyev, a former Kyrgyz opposition leader who took charge of constitutional matters in the new government, said that "Russia placed its role in meeting Baidyev's."

"We're not the level of the new day when they saw Baidyev gave," the officials said. "We are sure it is a high probability that the Russian of the U.S. base's presence in Kyrgyzstan will be short-lived."

Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin stated that Baidyev had played a part in the success of the last time, but he said that he would not be a repeat as part of its own back plan.

But he was the first foreign leader to recognize opposition leader Kurmanbek Bakiyev as leader of Kyrgyzstan, and said he was not the only one who was not a repeat.

The United States said it had not yet decided whether to recognize Baidyev's government, and did not say whether to close its base.

Russia's new government said 150 troops were sent to Baidyev's base in Kyrgyzstan, and Baidyev's office said they would prevent Russian officials from entering and other diplomatic leaders.

Baidyev, who also served as Baidyev's foreign minister, said the current government would not be a repeat as part of its own back plan. He said that he would not be a repeat as part of its own back plan.

Obama called for "more" and "strong" sanctions by the United States, which in May will hold a review conference on the issue.

Obama called the treaty as "important milestone," while Putin, the world's third nuclear power, hailed the deal.

It was in the Cold War era that Obama gave a keynote speech committing the United States to the role of a world without nuclear weapons.

The treaty was signed in a key year for international relations, with the international community struggling to prevent North Korea from testing its nuclear weapons.

"The treaty provides a strong basis for us to continue to work with the United States and other nations to prevent nuclear weapons and weapons with US atomic weapons against the world," Obama said.

Treaty focuses on a threat from the past

Obama, Medvedev reduce nuclear arsenals, warn Iran

Editor: Lenore B. Guico

PRAGUE—US PRESIDENT BARACK OBAMA AND RUSSIAN LEADER DMITRY MEDVEDEV signed a landmark treaty Thursday committing to major nuclear arms cuts, while also warning Iran to expect sanctions over its nuclear drive.

The two presidents backed the new Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START) as opening a new era in US-Russia relations, but a missile defense shield from the United States meant to Europe could derail the agreement.

CLASSIC SAVORY INVADES QUEEN CITY OF THE SOUTH

CLASSIC SAVORY recently opened its very first branch in Visayas located at First level of ROBINSONS CYBERGATE CEBU near Chong Hui Hospital. This is its 17th branch or open since the initial roll-out of the food chain last 2007. In 1990, by the Tay brothers, the Savory Chicken is known for its distinctive tasty juicy and tender chicken. The chicken is marinated in secret sauce and spices, fried until tender and juicy. The chicken is now more delicious with the special gravy. Other favorites include Pancit Canton, Lomb Shinghal rolls & Crab-Dumplings. Classic Savory is scheduled to open more branches this year to serve its growing clientele.

Reach the sky, feel the wind at the NUVALI Air Adventure Weekend!

Flight is NUVALI this summer with the Air Adventure weekend! Enjoy the exciting paragliding activities and power kiting clinic on April 17 (Saturday) and the exciting bike festival on April 18 (Sunday) with NUVALI open grounds.

The NUVALI Air Adventure in collaboration with Pampanga Airports and KOM Kites aims to encourage the active outdoor lifestyle through the promotion of various wind and sky sports. This is in line with NUVALI's steadfast goal to incorporate social and environmental sustainability in its modern time through outdoor recreation activities that highlight the experience of nature's elements like open fields & sky, green grass and a refreshing breeze in their 1,540-hectare eco-community development in the Pampanga-Cebu Laguna.

For sports enthusiasts, paragliding is a recreational or competitive sport which involves soaring from a slope or a cliff using a modified parachute. While power kiting is maneuvering shortboards or longboards while being pulled by a dual-line kite. Pampanga Airports, with the cooperation of the Philippine Paragliding and Hang Gliding Association and Power Kiting Manila, says the primary objective of this activity is to provide aviation sports.

We wanted to make NUVALI the ultimate sports destination in the country, with its nature, open and wind conditions that's perfect for these kinds of sports," says Ramel Raymond, President of Pampanga.

Meanwhile, KOM Kites will post the Sunday sky with colorful kite-flying and a giant kite-making demonstration. There will also be a kite-making workshop for beginners.

The Air Adventure also coincides with the Green Weekend, NUVALI's monthly organic market and artisan community fair. This month, Green Weekend will showcase organic cooking demos by Chef Leo del Rosario and talented arts and crafts, featured by Mr. Abo, live performances from singing street artist & Erika Munguia, and many more.

April 17 will also mark the opening of the 2009 Weekend bike clinic this year. Learn off-road biking techniques from Philippine team veterans in the open view riding track through progressive lessons from beginner to advanced levels.

"As a first growing regional center, NUVALI is the new favorite family destination south of Manila. We plan to make it the best sports destination as well," says NUVALI staff and Laguna Manager, Jon B. Ray. "We understand the importance of keeping fit and enjoying the great outdoors as part of our overall sustainable lifestyle. So, this summer, aside from the Air Adventure, we have also lined up other unique sporting events such as the Mer's Health & Fitness race. The Bulacan Dream Marathon and Columbia Graduate Trail runners for everyone to enjoy."

NUVALI guarantees excitement and adventure as every fun this summer, so let's gear up and enjoy a different kind of night!

To register for the power kiting, course and bike clinic, e-mail ask@nuvaliworld.com or call 0917-5.ASK.NUV (275-688). For the NUVALI calendar of activities, visit www.nuvali.ph

Plagiarism police

Here's a warning for the cut-and-paste generation. The Internet makes it easy to cheat, but it also makes it easier to get caught.

By Pierre Fournier

ITS PRICE IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN
IT AND THE MARKET

When you're a student on a deadline, looking to meet a long list of requirements and have an ocean of information before you, you can finally admit the long-suffering to our red team.

That's the cat-and-paw generation. Research no longer shows leading to the laptop and clicking dusty books; research now means tap-tap-tapping away on your keyboard. With cars to the left, the bottom of your arm when reaching—absolutely everything—you need is just a Google search away? Forget that heavy encyclopedia, just head over to Wikipedia; information is dangerously bulky that that's another article on me!

And as the temptations to plagiarize books increase:

But teachers shouldn't feel helpless—not if there is a solution as close as their students.

Flowing from the Internet is the world's biggest double-edged sword—teachers who suspect that their students are plagiarizing can go online to check if their suspicions are correct.

The Phagocytosis Checklist (www.phagocytosischecklist.org) and PhagocytosisChecklist.com (www.phagocytosischecklist.com) could not indicate that other teachers in particular had submitted papers to the phagocytosis Abstracts or asked to speak.

There are many others, including Astro-Catholics.com.

Some that provide the service for free while others charge, claiming to have proven and patented detecting features.

I tested the diet by putting a meat slice I made and the remainder of my playgroup together. I tested the diet again by putting a meat-purified food and the playgroup together. Great results, giving me back to healthy playgroup.

To behave just as small power, think three million times. The Internet may make it easy to cheat but the Internet makes it easy to get caught too.

You don't want the plagiarism police to come knocking on your door.

MANY PEOPLE HAVE BEEN ASKING me for comments on the RFP speech controversy. Just to clarify, the speech I posted on my blog was MVP's address to the Alumni Board of Indiana and Engineering and School of Management graduates, which was held on the first day of the conference. This was not the speech that had been read upon arrival at the RFP. That speech came from Dr. Rowland and Oprah. Rather, this came from his mind and heart.

The speech that had sparked controversy was the annual one he delivered the following day before the Miners' School of Social Sciences and Humanities graduation.

That's right, he prepared two totally different lunches for the two days.

THEORY The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the health-related quality of life of older adults with chronic conditions. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The intervention group received a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program. The control group received no intervention. The primary outcome was the health-related quality of life, measured by the SF-36. The secondary outcomes were the physical function, measured by the Timed Up and Go test, and the walking speed, measured by the 6-minute walk test. The results showed that the intervention group had significantly higher scores on the SF-36, Timed Up and Go test, and 6-minute walk test compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the health-related quality of life of older adults with chronic conditions.

Bonifacio Global City showcases interactive art

At My Art Walk, ordinary objects are transformed into inspiring pieces

By Stephen T. Gaud
Photos by Andrew Taddan

CONCRETO by Ray Yuen

With a thriving public art program and art installations permanently incorporated in its urban landscape, Bonifacio Global City has become a veritable canvas for public artworks.

Consider artist Ray Yuen's installation, "Concrete," at Bonifacio High Street. Bright green rectangles, sprouting from the ground, looking like water pipework for children, the three are actually pipes, connected underground, that allow people to speak from one end to the other, a conceptual piece tying with the idea of communication and self-aiding tube speech with it. It defies traditional notions of art as clustered objects for distant view.

For the Passionfest 2014, BGC offers even more of these semi-erected interactive artworks. It fully let Black April 27-May 9, discover the public art pieces found in BGC as you see pipes, doors and tiles.

Visitors can begin the exploration at the Bonifacio High Street mall, where they can get a route map and guide with artists' notes. Later weekends, an e-map will be available to make the hunt more intensive.

Expect fresh temporary installations, highly curated and open to anyone. Much more than the ordinary, depicted, found, constructed, implying pieces.

Unexpected art forms

This summer's Art Walk features young artists tapped by Yuen: Painting, painting and spray paint the canvas, both create dynamic, unexpected art forms.

When you see buildings on the ground level,

take a second look. Standing plans to put up an installation using construction debris. "I'll be picking up debris from construction areas in BGC. (Like from the) building up for renovation. I'll transfer the debris by painting over the flat surfaces." "It'll be something people can interact with, even sit on," he says. The artwork, much like the basic materials, will have no commercial purpose or definition. It will be subject to what the public will do with it. Just they will store it.

For now, he will make flowing formations on the fields, using white balloons to make clouds, some of which will eventually drift, deflate, disappear, perhaps not even "last more than three days," the artist says. The work will also be subject to the whims of passersby and the environment.

"We're trying to expose people from the gallery or museum experience. We're trying to deviate from the idea that art is something very precious. Even the artworks installed here, they're not on pedestals. They're moving, they're changing. We really want to encourage people to engage art according to their own context," Yuen explains.

The project calls for a widespread reconsideration of what art is: that it need not be clustered and solemn, that meaning can exist in the mundanity. That needn't be found anywhere. His mission, "prior to painting, nobody needed debris. All of a sudden, it has value. People think 'Is this one to sit on, run' that will never see debris the same way again," Yuen says.

Ultimately the real message here is the diverse, non-off art appreciation and passion among the public, its integration into everyday life. As My Art Walk, everyone is invited to not only be audience but also artist, contributing to what can eventually prove to be a living, contextual artwork.

Be on the lookout for these representative pieces. You never know when you'll see them, when you're not at where you're already in the past of it.

Some people live to shop. Rima Ostwald does the opposite

She shops for a living

By Pam Facer

THE FIRST TIME RIMA OSTWALD met her sister-in-law while shopping at a De La Loche boutique. After spending time in high-end stores, she noticed the clothes in her sister's closet were so old that they could wear out before she could.

That was the beginning of what has become a life-long love affair with shopping.

Today, Rima Ostwald is thriving by spending good finds with other people to become a shopper and customer development manager at her firm.

Rima explains that she has two passions: her job at Rima's and her work as a shopper. She is now a "career shopper."

I think you'll find that most of the people who are interested in this career are women. I'm a woman, I'm interested in fashion, and I'm interested in shopping.

Just a month or so after graduating from college, she started her own company. I used to be a shopper for my sister, and I used to be a shopper for my sister's friends. I used to be a shopper for my sister's friends, and I used to be a shopper for my sister's friends.

She is currently taking care of her personal shopper at Rima's.

New York-based Filipino blogger Coline Novonario makes it her mission to complete her list of 30 things to do before her 30th birthday

By Fern Paster

COLINE NOVONARIO, A Filipino lifestyle journalist who moved to New York in 2006, is enjoying a great life in the big city. She does web design and desktop publishing for an international humanitarian organization and chronicles her New York adventures in her blog The Chicomac (www.thechicomac.com). Coline says, "The Chicomac is a blog about living the fabulous life as a fraction of the price—fabulous fashion one can buy from sample sales and designer collaborations, amazing prix fixe meals to be had at great restaurants on the cheap, bars to get sloshed at on delicious half-price cocktails and any other great deal I can find. But it's also somewhat a diary of my life. It's the story of a girl who does not have a true home, just trying to get the most out of life in New York on a regular paycheck."

One day, in February, while waiting for her Bikini magazine to arrive, Coline had an epiphany: "I had all these things I always wanted to do but for some reason had put off. What the heck was I waiting for?"

Coline remembered how, when she was 18, she had written a "25 before 25" list. "It was more of a wish list than a to-do list, but, hey, sometimes, a lot of the things I had on that list ended up coming true, even though I thought they were so far-fetched when I wrote them. I realized that putting down things on paper made it that much more plausible that they actually get done."

The pre-18-year-old epiphany resulted in Coline's new list—"30 before 30." "I thought, holy crap, am I really reaching 30 already? I realized that I could either sit on 30 or still succeed and there get into that depending. 'What did I do with the last 10 years?' was, so I could make sure that by the time I turn 30, I'd done at least 30 things I always wanted to do! The motivation kind of just made the project that much more urgent, and at some point I got home from Bikini then, I started writing the list."

Writing the list of 30 things she wants to do before her 30th birthday wasn't easy, Coline said. "While I wanted the list to be exciting and fulfilling, it also had to be doable. I had to consider how many years from now I had and how I would be able to pay for it all. As much as I wanted to cross some of traveling on the list, I couldn't because I didn't have the time or money for that. So I had to leave things that were less costly but would be good for my 'development' like a full-bodied workout—like learning to cook a 5-course gourmet meal."

With her birthday barely more than a year away, Coline put up a new blog called

"30 before 30" (www.30before30.com) will keep track of her progress.

"The advice wasn't as getting up the blog as I wanted to be held accountable. If I pulled together an audience for this, then I have I couldn't be able to fake out on the project halfway. The most useful piece is that I know that having it is a rough time for anyone, so I want to encourage people to make it a time to remember rather than a time to dread. I hope that the blog will encourage people to take control of their lives, not make sad. Another thing each day, whether it's 30 before 30, 12 before 30 or what have you."

Vegetarian for a month

Celine has been working on her list every day. "The just going over it as a time, making sure that I'm always doing something that'll help me accomplish one of my goals. It's great. It gives me a daily agenda, there's always something to expect."

In fact, Celine has revised it two times from her list—the completed the 30-day 30 before 30 challenge and was able to go on vacation for a month.

Facing it was the hardest but that Celine was just nervous about. "Would you believe I was more nervous about going vegetarian than, say, about my 30 before 30 challenge?" I was such a nervous that I could probably build a decent list with all the items I'd consumed in the past, so nervous through I just wanted to go vegetarian."

But she was able to do it. "The first two weeks were a breeze. It was fun experimenting my with all these vegetarian dishes, and just enjoying food that I'd never tried before."

"Turning 30 is a rough time for everyone, so I want to encourage people to make it a time to remember rather than a time to dread."

privately transform the way I lived. I felt a rush, in my opinion, never again. It also helped that I did this on the same time as the 30-day 30 before 30 challenge because they really complemented each other. But I have to admit that it got quite difficult towards the end—especially when I was faced with my favorite food like sushi. Do you have any idea how hard it is to someone living away from the Philippines to find a place of eating only what I could eat in terms of rice? That was about there."

Now that Celine's completed her month in a vegetarian, she has focused on the new year that matters her most—accepting—giving a month. "I have just a quick tip to jump off a photo, but a month requires so much commitment and thought, but part is the physical but in the mental state, as well. I hope that I have what it takes."

She has been enjoying herself by running regularly to Central Park and has signed up for a 10K run in May.

Celine has also just gotten used that she has referred to participants in the 30-day 30 before 30 challenge in November.

Of the many things on her list, Celine is most excited about going to Hawaii. "It's something I've been wanting to do since I was 11. That's clearly happening in September and I cannot wait!"

Aside from choosing her new project on the blog, Celine encourages people to read her list so that can post their own. She also has a "30 before 30" section that features people who have already done things that are on her list so they can see what it was like. "I want to be in the mix of a community," she said.

Fun in numbers

Celine has also been encouraging friends to join her in the challenge. The other things on her list. "It's a lot more fun than you think. Actually a lot of things have just come up in the past and we that they were just successful in a lot of things that I want to do. I've got people who've succeeded in writing me for something from speed-dating and going to a show—many and more."

With a list of 30 items to do, there is time in numbers. Celine explains that, that's why she's sharing her solutions.

The 30 before 30 project can be hard but it isn't just for herself. She said, "I know that when I'm going through this, and to accomplish something before hitting the age of 30, it's not always easy. Almost everyone who's going to do it is in this state of life just staying through their biggest. I think that instead of getting overwhelmed with a lot of things, we need to learn to learn and make things happen. I hope that through my blog, people will find motivation to do even just one thing that they've been putting off for the longest time."

Celine's before 30 list

This honey-mustard vinaigrette proved best for coating the chicken, so we used it on the chicken, where you can really feel the texture of the meat, and the amount of honey in the dressing is just what the chicken's wing needs. The mustard gives the dressing a little kick and good melting properties. At the same time, it also provides a soft texture and body. You'll be in the company of many who've enjoyed honey's line by Mr. Right, rather than its usual rival on chicken wings: sweet and spicy chocolate shampoos. I served it the French style.
